Doc(K) Day line-up features a director's talk

The fifth annual haliburton documentary film festival - DOC(K) DAY - is April 9, 2016 at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton.

See four movies, starting at 10 am, that will surprise and inspire you with people doing the undoable. With a Skype interview and director's talk, this event will truly fascinate.

Passes for the day are $25. Tickets will be available at the door.

For more information call Lisa at 705-286-3696

Films:

10 a.m. All the Time in the World (1h 28)

In search of a new perspective, a family of five leave the comforts of home to live in the Yukon wilderness during the long northern winter. The parents leave their jobs and take their three children, ages 10, eight and four, to spend nine months in a small cabin with no road access, no electricity, no running water, no Internet, no TV, no phone and, most importantly, no clocks or watches.

Featuring the unique perspectives of the children, All the Time in the World explores the theme of disconnecting from hectic and technology-laden lives in order to reconnect with self, each other, and our natural environment. The mother, Suzanne Crocker, will be doing a Skype interview after the movie. Families are encouraged to come with tickets only $5.

1:30 p.m. How to Change the World (1h 50)

In 1971 a brave group of young activists set sail from Vancouver in an old fishing boat. Their mission: to stop Nixon's atomic bomb. It was from these humble but courageous beginnings the global organization we now know as Greenpeace was born. Chronicling the fascinating untold story behind the modern environmental movement, this gripping film tells the story of eco-hero Robert Hunter and how he, alongside a group of like-minded and idealistic young friends in the '70s, would be instrumental in altering the way we now look at the world and our place within it.

4 p.m. Meru (1h30)

Gripping visually as well as narratively, this rare documentary proves thought-provoking while offering thrilling wide-screen vistas. Sitting 21,000 feet above the sacred Ganges River in Northern India, Mount Meru's perversely stacked obstacles make it both a nightmare and an irresistible calling. Three elite climbers struggle to find their way through obsession and loss as they attempt to climb one of the most coveted prizes in the high stakes game of Himalayan big wall climbing. MERU is the story of an expedition through nature's harshest elements, complicated inner demons, and ultimately on to impossible new heights.

7:30 p.m. Blind Spot: Moments Unseen (1h30), Q&A with Director Stefan Morel and Producer Leslie Haller to follow.

There is more to seeing than sight. This award-winning vision-quest documentary features three visually impaired adventurers who journey by horseback into the heart of the Andes. The environment awakens the blind riders' and their sighted guides' untapped senses. This juxtaposition of perceptions expands our perspective on how to interpret everyday obstacles. Blind Spot: Moments Unseen defies the conventional views on blindness to chronicle a voyage of self-discovery chronicling what we see, what we can't see, and what we overlook. The director, Stefan Morel, will be doing a presentation after the movie discussing the fascinating elements of making it.

Like a fox

The newest furry creature to join the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation's family is Freckles the Fox, introduced last week to the community. The name for the fox was thought up by HHHS X-ray technician Keriann Griffin, front, and chosen out of about 40 entries. Griffin chose the name because of the animal's freckles on his nose. The fox retails for $20 and can be found at locations throughout the county, with proceeds going towards the health organization. Back from left, HHHSF executive director Dale Walker and HHHSF board chairman Peter Oyler. ANGELICA INGRAM Staff

Senior's Spotlight

Ideas that make life easier

By Wayne Hussey

1. When you return home from shopping and carry parcels or a case of beer to your door, have a shelf or a barbecue side table to set the parcel on while you open the door. This saves putting your parcel on the floor and bending to pick it back up.

2. If you make two slices of bread into toast, use a dinner plate not a bread and butter plate. The dinner plate holds the two pieces flat so they don't have to be stuck one on top of the other. The buttered, jam and peanut butter pieces are much better separated than stacked and the dishwasher doesn't know the difference between a big plate and a small plate.

3. Showering: When you shower, put the tub drain stop in. This allows you to soak your feet in lots of soapy water. This soaking is good for them and makes sure they are clean when you have finished.

4. Load your wheelbarrow with firewood and if possible push it inside your house to unload it. This saves a lot of lugging and you can pile while you are warm.

5. Cereal Boxes: I used to find it difficult to pour cereal from the cereal box to the bowl. After tearing off the small box flap next to the side you are pouring cereal from, it becomes much easier to get the portion you want and to stop and start.

6. Having to sit down to tie your shoe laces every time you go out is inconvenient and annoying. I have been able to leave my running shoes tied with nice bows by using a shoe horn to put them back on. Works great and with a long shoe horn saves bending.

If you have ideas that make your life easier, please send them in so others can enjoy. Call Wayne at 705-457-0030, email: waynelhussey@hotmail.com

How about the weather?

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

Mark Twain once said, "Everyone talks about the weather but no one does anything about it."

Well, I'm about to prove him wrong. Here are 10 things to talk about, other than the weather.

1. Linoleum: I know what you are thinking. Linoleum? In my defence, linoleum and linoleum-related products are easily as exciting as most types of weather-related conversations.
2. The heartbreak of psoriasis: I recall when I was a kid, there were far more conversations regarding the heartbreak of psoriasis. I think we can all agree those were happier, simpler times.
3. Velcro: I bet most people have spoken about snow or rain thousands of times but have never had a truly meaningful conversation about Velcro with anyone.
4. Practical things you would do in a world without love: We have all heard those old lyrics, "I don't care what they say I won't live in a world without love." But, honestly, I think it's time we talked about it and faced the fact no other options are available.
5. The pronunciation of tomato: For far too long we've been arguing about this and then threatening to call the whole thing off. How about coming to a consensus instead? Maybe it's time we took a page from the potato people.
6. Belly button lint: Belly button lint, as we all know, is the silent killer, but only when we allow it to build up to the point where it incapacitates a person. Maybe it's time to shed some light on this.
7. How do you solve a problem like Maria?: This is a question that has haunted us for far too long. Maybe we could come up with an answer it if we stopped talking about the rain for a minute or two.
8. My good looks.: I don't mean to make a big deal of this but when was the last time anyone talked about this.
9. Why are you walking around in my underwear? Admittedly, this is a conversation you only have with your pets in the privacy of your own home, but given the opportunity it's still better than talking about the relative humidity.
10. Was the answer actually blowing in the wind because Bob Dylan read that cheat sheet in a tornado?

Crooked Brothers bring music to Haliburton

Music that is described as both gritty and pretty at the same time is what one can expect at the Crooked Brothers' concert on Saturday April 16th, 2016 at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion.

The Crooked Brothers describe their music as home-brewed. They play homegrown, homemade music. They have a special way of incorporating folk, blues, rock and much more into their songs. Sometimes it's as simple as three sweet harmonies, or a single harmonica holding the whole room at attention, and sometimes things growl and shake and come smashing down with a filthy rhythm beneath it. But it's all Crooked Brothers, to the last drop.

They essentially embellish their rootsy folk music with the more urban sounds of rock, blues, jazz and funk. It must be experienced to be fully understood.

The group consists of Jesse Mantas, Darwin Baker, and Matt Foster. They were friends who left their punk band roots to get started in acoustic music, bringing musical influences from Leonard Cohen to Dr. Dre.

As a result their concerts are filled with banjos, mandolins, guitars and much more. Instruments are juggled from one to the other, each with their own style and touch, making the arrangements seem limitless and giving each piece its own individual flavor.

Audiences are struck by Matt's unforgettably strange voice, inhuman and gravelly deep, as well as Darwin's deft handling of the harmonica and Jesse's stories and poems turned lyrics. The music will take one on a journey that leads to a good cry, followed by a good laugh, and then a dance in the street without your shoes. The Crooked Brothers' songs move from sorrow to joy and back with a surprising grace.

The Crooked Brothers have performed to sold-out rooms at festivals overseas such as Brighton's Great Escape, and Willisau, Switzerland's Spring Bluegrass Festival. They have toured 10 countries, played in nearly every province and territory in Canada, and have released three full length albums, as well as an EP that comes available exclusively on limited-edition postcards.

Raven Mad Crow Society will open the concert and master of ceremonies will be Lesley English.

The Crooked Brothers will be performing, as part of the Haliburton County Folk Concert Series, on Saturday, April 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton. Doors open at 7. Tickets are available online at http://www.haliburtonfolk.com, Halco Electronics/The Source in Haliburton and Organic Times in Minden. Get to know Haliburton Family Businesses

The Pump Shop

In Haliburton, we place a lot of faith in water. We assume it will be pure enough to drink, warm and soft enough to wash with, forever flowing, never flooding and always plentiful.

Since 1987, The Pump Shop has worked hard to ensure that faith hasn't faltered.

Manager Jesse Woodward, son of founders Wade and Jane, says that's because their business is built upon the belief that everyone should have reliable access to the water they need.

That simple statement often requires expertise and experience – and that's where The Pump Shop comes in.

Their dedicated team of professionals, which numbers up to 22 during peak season, understands the intricacies of pumps, wells, lake water systems, water purification and filtration. Better still they can help ensure these integral components function year round.

The Pump Shop sells and services hot tubs and accessories, pumps, hot water tanks, waste water systems, water treatment and purification systems and winter and summer systems for homes, cottages and larger institutions. They also open and close cottages, and provide free water testing.

Their team of experts have solved every water-related issue cottage country has thrown at them. They'll purify the water you drink, ensure it's available in winter, soften the water you use or install a hot tub. And, of course, if you have a pump-related issue, they're the obvious choice.

They're expert in reverse osmosis, softener, iron filter and UV light technologies.

More than that, they recognize the relaxation water can provide, which is why they have been selling hot tubs since 1997. They represent Beachcomber and Marquis brands and sell a full line of accessories and chemicals. They'll also balance the water in your hot tub so it is ready when you are.

The Pump Shops expertise extends beyond residential and cottage services. In fact, they have designed and installed water systems for most resorts, hospitals and children's camps in the County.

Their willingness to help with water issues doesn't stop at the County's borders. Wade is a Team Leader with Water Ambassadors Canada – an organization that helps provide safe water in Third World countries. They've participated in eight international trips to install and repair wells and filter systems for those in need.

The Pump Shop, located at 5161 County Road #21 in Haliburton, is also a member of the Ontario Groundwater Association, our local Home Builder's Association and Chamber of Commerce too.

"1 billion people worldwide lack access to clean water," Jesse says. "We know how important water is."

To find out more visit www.thepumpshop.ca or email Jesse at jesse@thepumpshop.ca or call 705-457-2638.

OHTO to launch new marketing campaign

The Ontario's Highlands Tourism Organization (OHTO) is inviting tourism stakeholders across the region to participate in the first reveal of the Come Wander brand and to provide valuable input at stakeholder sessions being held at various locations throughout Ontario's Highlands on April 19 and 20.

OHTO has successfully tested an experiential marketing approach over the past year, most recently with the #WinterWander campaign. This campaign had an impact on OHTO's visitor engagement, with Instagram and Facebook followers seeing an increase of more than 4,000, traction on digital media with over 4 million earned impressions, and more than 12,000 'click-throughs' to operator websites, far surpassing goals outlined prior to the campaign.

OHTO is now excited to capitalize on this momentum and fully embrace experiential marketing with a comprehensive brand strategy for Come Wander.

Attendees at the stakeholder sessions will partake in the reveal of the Come Wander Brand as well as lend their expertise with in-depth input sessions to ensure the innovative approach to marketing the region reflects the authentic character of the communities and incredible experiences available across Ontario's Highlands.

"Our goal is for attendees to walk away from the sessions excited by the possibilities Come Wander can have with their businesses and communities," says Julie Mulligan, marketing manager for OHTO. "Together, we can activate a strategy that will unite our industry, stay ahead of the curve with our best consumers and build momentum for becoming the most talked about region in Ontario."

There will be two sessions held on Tuesday, April 19 and two held on Wednesday, April 20. Tuesday's sessions will take place in the morning from 9a.m.-11a.m. at Tay River Reflections in Perth and in the afternoon from 2p.m.-4p.m. at the Hastings Arts Centre in Madoc. Wednesday's sessions will be held in the morning from 9a.m.-11a.m. at Pinestone Resort & Conference Centre in Haliburton and in the afternoon from 2p.m.-4p.m. at Spectacle Lake Lodge in South Algonquin.

Stakeholders seeking additional information or looking to indicate plans to join the sessions are encouraged to visit www.ohto.ca or to contact Julie Mulligan at julie.mulligan@ohto.ca or 1-855-629-6486.

About Beer

Better Bitters

A guided tour through the art, science and history of our favourite 7,000-year-old beverage with beer columnist Brent Milcz.

In part one of our journey from grain to glass, we discussed malt and what it contributes to a beer. This week our topic is the yin to malt's yang, and the focal point for the craft-beer-loving masses of late—hops. Hops are the cones of the flowering plant humulus lupulus, which grow on a bine rather than a vine. The difference is that hops climb without the use of tendrils, helixing (to invent a word) their way around their trellis. At the peak of growing season, a bine can grow up to a foot in a day—so fast that you can literally see it growing in an afternoon. Like grapes, hops have terroir, and growing the same hop variety in different regions and conditions will give the plant different characteristics. For ease of use in brewing, hops are typically shredded and pressed into uniform pellets.

Hops bring several things to a great beer, but their primary purpose is to provide balance. As discussed last time, malt provides our sugar from fermentation. This sugar is converted into alcohol by our yeast—bless their little single-celled souls—but it is rare for a yeast strain to metabolize all of the sugar provided. That residual sugar left behind by the yeast would leave us with a cloyingly sweet beverage if we did not balance it out with bitterness.

This is where hops come in. Before the widespread use of hops, something called gruit ("groo-it") was used. Gruit is a combination of herbs such as yarrow, horehound, mugwort, and some other more or less silly-sounding names. The beverage made from these herbs is also called gruit, rather than beer. In the Middle Ages in most of Europe, gruit was your only option at the pub. The Catholic Church, however, had proprietary knowledge of, and controlled distribution of the favoured gruit mix of the time. Switching to hops was a way for brewers to get out from under the thumb of the Church, and it was later discovered that hops provide a preservative effect to beer that gruit did not. Hops have an anti-bacterial quality that works in conjunction with beer's alcohol and low pH to create a microbiologically stable beverage that is not prone to dangerous spoilage.

When adding hops to a beer, depending on the timing of our additions, we can impart bitterness, flavour or aroma to the beer. By pitching our hops into boiling wort, we will isomerize alpha acids, the active bittering component in hops. The longer they are exposed to boiling wort, the more bitterness we can expect in the beer (measured as IBUs—or international bitterness units). Some hops have higher alpha acids than others. By adding hops near to or at the end of the boil we'll get the characteristic hop flavours and aromas we recognize (piney, spicy, earthy, citrusy). These come from the volatile essential oils in the hops. If these oils are exposed to a vigorous boil for too long, they will flash off and we will lose these flavour and aroma qualities. To avoid this flashing off effect, we can also add hops directly to our fermenting beer in a process known as dry-hopping. Dry-hopping preserves a great deal of aroma, and is a technique widely used in IPAs to provide a potent nose.

Brent Milcz is the head brewer for Carnarvon's Boshkung Brewing Company.

Country hoedown raises money for Lions Club

By Jenn Watt

Plaid shirts and cowboy hats dotted the crowd at the Haliburton Legion branch on Saturday, March 19 for the second annual Lions Club Chuck Wagon Dinner and Hoedown.

The smell of meat pie and baked beans wafted onto Mountain Street along with music from Gord Kidd and Friends, all in the name of raising funds for the community.

"The more money we make the more money we give," said Lion David Mills.

More than 100 people attended the event, spending $25 for the meal and music and more money still on auction items.

The Chuck Wagon Dinner is the only traditional fundraiser put on by the local Lions Club, said Betty Mills, chairwoman of the event.

The Lions got the idea from the Omemee club, Betty said.

"We have an awful lot of country [in Haliburton County]," she said. It was a perfect fit.

The Haliburton Lions Club has 27 members with two more coming in.

Money raised through the Lions' regular barbecues or at the hoedown go right back into the local community.
